Amendment to the Specification

Please add the following new paragraphs at page 18, line 12.

Substantially Insert to Patent Specifications:

Unless otherwise expressly indicated, when used throughout this document the term "substantially" shall have the meaning of "approximation", not "magnitude"; i.e., it shall have the meaning, "being largely but not wholly that which is specified." See, Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, Merriam-Webster Inc., 1989. Hence, applicant is not using the term "substantially" to denote "considerable quantity" or "significantly large," but is instead using the term as a qualifier/minimizer of a term. For example, in the phrase "the head portion is substantially above the body portion," "substantially above" is meant to indicate that while most of the head portion can be located above the body portion, there is certainly at least some of the head portion located in planes with the body portion, or even below parts of the body portion. As a further example, the phrase "substantially hollow," is meant to indicate that the item is almost totally hollow, but there might be small areas where it is not. These examples are meant to be illustrative of the meaning to be attributed to the term "substantially" as used throughout this document, even if these particular phrases are not found herein.
